Artist rendering of the 95,000 square foot Law Building Addition to be completed June 1992. Renovation of present building will begin this summer.

Time and Change

This is a special time for the College of Law. We are celebrating our centennial while a major addition to the law building is taking shape. In a number of respects, anniversaries—such as an institution's reaching the century mark—look backward to a lengthening past. There will be some of that here in 1991-92. But the dominant theme, I believe, should be a forward-looking one. In this sense the changes underway in our physical facilities are a tangible expression of our collective faith in the future. We need more and better-designed space for the second century of the law school's existence. More importantly, we must commit ourselves to using that space wisely and well—for the benefit of the next generation of Ohio State lawyers and the society which they, and we, seek to serve. The more difficult question, of course, is how to do that.

Building Addition and Renovation

At the risk of some repetition, let me include a brief discussion of what the new space is designed for. Almost 2/3 of the 95,000 square feet in the building addition is for library-related purposes. This includes additional stack space for an ever-growing collection, but space as well for new and developing information systems. A large computer laboratory is in the plans, as well as an audio-visual system center. More offices and work space for our library staff, a bench and bar reading room, a number of group-study rooms, and a library classroom are all in the works. Non-library areas of the addition will include new offices for faculty and staff, new lounges for faculty, students and staff, renovated space for our clinical programs, expanded and upgraded space for our two law journals and other student organizations, and at least two suites for specialized centers or institutes—one of which is already committed to our socio-legal studies center. We will not be adding any new classrooms, as we are planning for a steady, not increasing, enrollment in the years ahead. Several of the existing spaces will, however, be renovated to accommodate modest-size classes of 40 to 50 students. And the auditorium will be completely modernized and upgraded. Whether we will be able to renovate the larger classrooms as well is still unsettled and is dependent on the University's being able to provide additional funding for that much-needed piece of the overall pie.

Externally, the enlarged and renovated law building will present a different—and striking—perspective. The addition will almost double the size of the existing building and will reorient its face toward the University campus. Indeed, the main entrance to the facility will be near the corner of 12th and College, away from High Street. The limestone exterior of the addition will, we hope, blend reasonably well with the existing facades on the east and south sides, which will largely be unchanged. The lines will be modern, and relatively simple. The materials will seek to convey a sense of strength and permanence, while other features—including a “clear story” in the new library space—will add a feeling of light and height to the structure. Much of the adjacent parking, not surprisingly, will be gone. All in all, the expanded and renovated facility we plan on dedicating in the spring of 1993 will, we hope, be an imposing and congenial home for the law school for the next quarter century or so.

Let's assume that we have planned the addition appropriately, the architects have designed it effectively, and the contractors build it well. How, then, do we go about maximizing the opportunities the facility offers? First, we must continue to do all we can to get and keep the very best people. Faculty who teach very well and take scholarship and service very seriously. Staff who are talented and dedicated. Students who are well-qualified and motivated. And, providing continuity, alumni and friends who are interested and supportive. Without capable and committed people, our people-intensive enterprise will never realize its potential. And, I might add, the new facility should make an enormous difference to us in regard to the attitudes of the place's people. Those who work and study here will feel better about themselves and what they are doing. And those who visit periodically will have, I hope, a greater sense of pride in and esteem for the school.

Academic Programs

The other essential ingredient is the school's academic program. There is no question that we will be able to do more worthwhile things, and do them better, in the enlarged and modernized building. Space has been planned and designed for what we seek to do in a focused way—more involvement in socio-legal studies (in conjunction with our Oxford partners), a new masters degree program in law and finance (to begin in 1993 or 1994), and expansion of our clinical offerings (with particular emphasis on alternative methods of dispute resolution), in particular. In addition, we will have space as well for maintaining, indeed enhancing, the stature of our fine law library as one of the top legal information centers in the country. We also need to continue to enhance our emphasis on the international and comparative dimensions of law and legal systems, in light of the increasingly interdependent world in which our graduates will function in the next century. We must continue to provide a sound and sensible J.D. degree program for the benefit of the vast majority of our students, and at the same time expand and diversify our involvement in skills training. In curriculum and methodology, as well as in research and service, we must aggressively play a leadership role—in Ohio and nationally, among law schools and within the University.

Resources and Mission

What are the potential pitfalls and obstacles to achieving these objectives in the early years of the law school's second century? There are lots of them, some of which are easier to overcome than others. Bureaucratic inertia is a perennial concern at an institution as large as Ohio State. It weighs one down and may eventually wear one out. Limited resources are a problem of larger dimension. The State of Ohio does not fund public higher education very well, and the recent round of budget cuts for the next biennium worsens the existing situation. The College of Law was required to reduce an already sparse budget by approximately $200,000 for the 1991-92 academic year. We cannot sustain such cuts for long without affecting the core of what we do. Nor can we continue to assure access to all, as public institutions should, when forced to pass on an escalating share of the cost to students. Simply stated, we will not in future years be able to do all of the things we could, indeed should, do in terms of teaching, research, and service—with an increasingly inadequate budget. It is of little consolation to us that similar problems exist in a number of other States. Of course private financial assistance can help. It has already helped us greatly and, we hope, will do so in future years. But it is not, and can never be, a substitute for sufficient public support. America will suffer for a long time if we continue to renege on public support for higher education and place our societal priorities elsewhere.

At the same time, it should be obvious that the education-bashing that is currently fashionable contributes little of value. Of course universities could and should be improved, and can and must do a better job. What is needed, though, is thoughtful commentary, together with support, not finger pointing or mindless rhetoric. Higher education in America is seeking to provide direction in achieving more racial and gender diversity in our society. Those who object to this seem to have found a convenient target in attacking the "politically correct" thinking of some who have their own vision of universities. But most of us in higher education do not necessarily share all the views of the PC advocates simply because we support a more diverse student body, faculty, and academic program. Indeed, the hard-core PC folks seem to be a relatively small group whom opponents of higher education have chosen, for their own political purposes, to characterize as representative of minorities and the institutions generally. Those of us who are in responsible positions in higher education need to respond to these attacks in measured, consistent ways. And we badly need the understanding and encouragement of alumni and friends in this regard. Most importantly, universities should never run the risk of forfeiting ownership of the First Amendment to those who would criticize us and others. Personal attacks aside, higher education must enthusiastically embrace and defend freedom of speech, even when and where it is difficult or uncomfortable to do so. If we fail to do that, the criticism we receive will be amply deserved.

Challenges for Legal Education

For law schools in particular, especially those with new and spacious facilities, the challenges are considerable. All of the problems of universities are ours, since our concerns reflect those of society generally. Yet we are pulled away from the academic enterprise by the tugs of the legal profession of which we are an integral part. This tension can frequently be a healthy one, but the strain becomes greater when the inevitable distance between the two—the academy and the profession—increases. On an elementary level, this tension reflects itself in terms of our responsibility to educate students who can pass bar exams and be effective as practitioners, but at the same time to develop in our graduates an understanding of law and the legal system that will serve them well over a generation or more. They—and we—must be both doers and thinkers. In a more sophisticated way, law schools must at once be essential parts of and yet distinct from the profession we serve. Notions of academic freedom and institutional autonomy assure some of this separateness. But, pressed too far, these notions would result in a detachment approaching isolation that would serve neither the profession nor the academy well. It will hardly surprise anyone to be told that our legal system is in significant disarray and is under sustained attack, and not only from Vice President Quayle. Public dislike for and distrust of lawyers has increased considerably in recent decades. What lawyers do is perceived as costing too much and taking too long—and, in many instances, as complicating rather than resolving society's problems. Lawyers themselves are viewed as money-hungry entrepreneurs engaged in highly profitable business enterprises. Litigation is regarded as a game in which the only winners are often the lawyers, not their clients. Consequently, there are millions of Americans for whom the legal system seems to work badly, or not at all. Law schools, in turn, are perceived as being part of this systemic problem, instead of contributing to its solution. Within the legal profession, law schools are often the scapegoats for those concerned about and reacting to the external criticisms of lawyers. And, within the academy, law schools are frequently viewed in the same way the public regards lawyers generally.

This is neither a happy nor a healthy situation. There is fault enough to pass around—within the profession and among universities. All of us must work together to change the way the legal system—and lawyers—function and are perceived. Law schools should be centrally involved in this endeavor of redirecting lawyers toward serving the public more effectively. Institutionally we need to develop our own vision of the future, but one that is not too rigid or confined, for the one certainty about our time is change. To reflect this vision, in a collective way, our faculty must function as prescriptive chroniclers of a better time, not simply as the Mr. Chips of an earlier day. To do these things, in and with the academy as well as the profession, we need a refined sense of ourselves and of the roles we seek to play. And we need to resolve to persist in this endeavor despite distractions and disappointments. As the recently completed report of our ABA inspection team states, ours is a "fundamentally strong school," one with "high morale" and "confidence in the future," and a community that senses that "major constraints will be removed by the substantial expansion and improvement of the physical plant." We have much to build on.

Our Second Century

What, then, is the essential message of our centennial? To me, at least, it is that this law school has not only survived, but it has prospered over a significant period of time. It did so not only by reacting to change, but by shaping some of the changes that have occurred, in legal education and the profession, and in society. Creating more space for the future, with the invaluable help of alumni and friends, says that we intend to continue to accept the demands of the future and deal with them as well as we can. The greatest challenge is to be willing to act, in the face of doubt and confusion, on the most reliable information one has. We are doing that, albeit flexibly, in designing and constructing the building addition. We must do so as well as we reshape and sharpen the focus of our academic endeavors, as well as our role in higher education and in the legal profession. In 2091, one hundred years from now, they will probably still be singing "Carmen, Ohio" in Columbus, with its haunting final stanza. Our vision need not extend that far in time, but it should nonetheless assume the likelihood of a bicentennial, and beyond. The firmness of the friendship among those joined in our common venture, which the Ohio State alma mater celebrates, will make the task ahead a bit less burdensome and a little more enjoyable for all of us.

In closing, I would like to encourage our over 7,000 alumni and our friends to join with our outstanding faculty, staff, and student body, and with me, in celebrating our centennial throughout 1991-92, as a prologue to what lies ahead in the dawning second century of Ohio State's involvement in legal education.

Members of the Henry Folsom Page Society and their spouses attended the annual Society dinner held May 8, 1991, at the Capital Club of Columbus. The dinner provided the opportunity to review fund-raising activities and to present the Ohio State Law Award, established in 1990.

Society officers Robert J. Watkins '53, Thomas E. Cavendish '53, and Frank E. Bazler '53 participated in the program. Special thanks were expressed to John R. Meyer, Director of Development for the past ten years, who leaves the College to take on new duties with the Development Fund.

Dean Francis X. Beytagh introduced the 1991 Ohio State Law Award recipient, Erwin N. Griswold, former dean of Harvard University Law School for twenty-one years, and former Solicitor General of the United States. Dean Beytagh, who served under Griswold in the Solicitor General's Office, reported that Dean Griswold had argued 127 cases before the United States Supreme Court, the most appearances of any living attorney.

Dean Emeritus Erwin N. Griswold receives Ohio State Law Award.

Dean Beytagh stated that "Dean Griswold has served the legal profession with distinction for over sixty years as a practitioner, legal educator and scholar, and public servant, and has been an ardent supporter of civil rights."

Since 1973, Dean Griswold has been a partner in the Washington, D.C., office of Jones, Day, Reavis &

Pogue. His public service record includes president, American Association of American Law Schools; president, American Bar Foundation; and member, U.S. Civil Rights Commission. He has received many honors, including thirty honorary degrees.

A native Ohioan, Griswold entertained the dinner guests with stories about his family and early Ohio experiences, such as sitting for the 1929 bar examination in the Ohio Armory in 45° temperature. He also remembered fondly his friendship with Frank Strong and Jeff Fordham, who served as former deans of this College.

Dean Griswold appreciated this opportunity to "come home" and was moved by the honor. He became the second recipient of the Ohio State Law Award. Justice Lewis F. Powell, Jr., United States Supreme Court, accepted the 1990 award.

Centennial Celebrations

The College of Law kicked off its Centennial with a weekend of celebrations on September 13 and 14 organized around the theme "100 Years Serving Justice Through Scholarship." Over 900 individual reservations were received for the weekend's festivities.

Annual Return Luncheon

Following an early morning meeting of the National Council, the Annual Return Luncheon was held at the Fawcett Center. Alumni and friends gathered to honor the College of Law faculty and to install new Alumni Association officers. The group enjoyed remarks from Nancy L. Sponseller '77, 1990-91 President of the Law Alumni Association and Chair of the Centennial Planning Committee; David A. Ward '58, incoming president of the Law Alumni Association; Robert J. Watkins '53, Chair of the National Council; and Dean Francis X. Beytagh.

Alumni attend luncheon.

Through Scholarship"

Outgoing President Nancy L. Sponseller thanks the faculty on behalf of graduates.

CLE With the Faculty

The Friday afternoon program was designed to welcome alumni back to the classroom with faculty making presentations on the general topics of ethics and commercial law. Professor Arthur F. Greenbaum served as chair of the first panel for presentations given by Professors Morgan E. Shipman and Nancy H. Rogers. The second panel was chaired by Professor Albert L. Clovis, and presentations were made by Professors David Williams, II, and Douglas J. Whaley.

Gala Birthday Dinner

The highpoint of the weekend's festivities was the Friday evening Centennial Gala Birthday Dinner. The Ohio Union Ballrooms were transformed for the 300 alumni, faculty, students, friends, and guests sharing in the celebration. Alumni gathered in the West Ballroom for the "Stroll Through History" reception, which featured displays chronicling the College's first 100 years of progress. Jazz sounds of "Buckeye Brass" enlivened the festivities.

A dramatic moment occurred when the divider wall to the East Ballroom rose to a musical fanfare, and guests symbolically entered the College's second century. Black and white table decor, accented with tiered flower and candelabra centerpieces, presented a futuristic ambience. A spotlighted wall mural of a scales of justice set off the colored rendering of the Law Building Addition under construction.

Professor Lawrence Herman

Professor Larry Herman served as master of ceremonies. Congratulatory remarks on behalf of the University were brought by Vice President and Provost Frederick E. Hutchinson, who was standing in for President Gee. Chief Justice Thomas J. Moyer '64 also delivered special anniversary remarks. His participation was appropriate to the occasion because the first dean of the school of law established in 1891 was Marshall J. Williams, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Ohio.

Following dinner service, a procession of waiters entered the room with sparklers, champagne, and dessert to the accompaniment of a medley of Ohio State favorites and "Happy Birthday" refrains. Special toasts were made by alumni Robert J. Watkins '53, Edwin M. Cooperman '67, Joan M. Krauskopf '57, Josiah H. Blackmore '62 and student Robert Goldstein '92. The evening celebrations concluded with remarks from Dean Francis X. Beytagh. A fluted champagne glass bearing the centennial seal was given to each celebrant as a memento of the evening.

Alumni Celebrate

Alumni sample hors d'oeuvres.

Darold Greek '32 and wife with classmate Robert Richards.

Classmates Michael T. George '73 and Frank A. Ray and wives enjoy festivities.

Class of 1941 members reminisce.

Saturday Pre-Game Openhouse

Alumni and friends visited at the College, toured through the construction site for the Law Building Addition, and visited on the steps of Page Hall. A special box lunch was served in the President's Office foyer on the second floor of Bricker Hall, a.k.a. the Administration Building. Alumni enjoyed their campus visit to old and new sites before proceeding to the stadium for the Louisville v. OSU football game.

Class Reunions

Nine class reunions were scheduled for the Centennial Weekend. The 50-year Reunion Class, coordinated by Joseph B. DeVennish and J. Gordon Peltier, met at the Parke University Inn; the Class of 1971, coordinated by Charles W. Kettlewell, also gathered at the Parke; the Class of 1951, coordinated by Donald E. Calhoun, and the Class of 1956, coordinated by Walter J. Wolske, celebrated at the Great Southern Hotel; the Class of 1966, coordinated by Michael D. Saad and James M. Tuschman, held their 25th anniversary at the Hyatt on Capitol Square; and the Class of 1981, coordinated by Elaine S. Buck, Jon A. Christensen, Renee Kauffman, Daniel J. Minor, Kathryn Kerr Minor, and Steven L. Oliver, met at the Winding Hollow Country Club. The reunions capped an active weekend of events.

Special thanks goes to Centennial Planning Committee Members Nancy L. Sponseller '77, Chair; Belinda S. Barnes '87; Albert L. Bell '59; Dan E. Belville '88; Jay E. Jadwin '87; Suzanne Kramer Lucci '82; Harold D. Paddock '73; and S. Martijn Steger '83. Thanks also go to all the alumni who made the commitment to participate in the historic weekend of activities.

Dean Henderson Retires

As the new year begins, a dedicated administrator, respected colleague, and friend will soon be missing from the College office. Dean John P. (Jack) Henderson will join the ranks of the retired on January 31, 1992. "I have mixed emotions," says Dean Henderson, "but I feel the time is right for me personally and for my family."

Dean Henderson joined the College administration in 1971 upon completion of his Ph.D. in educational administration at Ohio State. His primary assignment since that time has been admissions and financial aid. His willingness to take on assignments, coupled with his capable management skills, expanded his administration to include building coordination, staff personnel, various student services, continuing legal education, and, in recent years, service on the Planning Committee for the building addition and renovation.

"The job has been the best of both worlds," Henderson believes. "I got into education because I enjoyed young people, and I enjoy being an administrator. I have an abundance of contact with applicants and law students—some of the very best of each generation—and yet I still have the opportunity to be of service to faculty and others in administrative capacities."

Dean Henderson has labored diligently on behalf of the College and its students and has earned universal admiration. "Jack Henderson has served the College of Law with great distinction and dedication for the past two decades. He is a respected leader among law school admissions officers, and in a number of important ways has contributed to making Ohio State a better place. We shall find a successor, but not, at least in the short term, a replacement," reflects Dean Francis X. Beytagh.

These sentiments are echoed by others. "One of the real joys of working at the College over the years has been my association with Jack Henderson," says Dean Joanne Wharton Murphy. "No one could ask for a better work colleague, nor any institution ask for a more conscientious and competent administrator."

Professor Howard Fink agrees. "I have had the privilege of working with Jack Henderson in virtually all of his many roles at the College from the time he arrived, particularly in admissions, recruiting, and planning for the new building. His work on planning, from the very first moment, has been like all that he does—selfless, thorough, and dedicated to only one goal—what is enduringly best for the College of Law. Like everyone here at the College, I will miss him."

Professor Rhonda Rivera, who has worked with Dean Henderson many years in admissions, summarizes the feelings of faculty and students. "Jack's greatest contribution has been his humane approach to all issues. No one has ever doubted his fairness, his compassion, and his competency.

Jack is a model of an administrator and a damn fine man."

Fortunately for the College, Dean Henderson's work at the College will not end on January 31, 1992. He has agreed to stay on under special contract to complete his responsibilities as the liaison between the College and the contractors for the new addition construction which is scheduled for completion in late 1992.

Jack Henderson has always been at home in education. Upon completion of his degree from Kent State and military service, he began teaching and coaching in Painesville, Ohio. In 1965, after completing his M.A. at Ohio State, he moved from the classroom to administration, accepting his first assignment as a high school principal. Later he became an Assistant Superintendent for Personnel and Community Relations for the Centerville City Schools. He returned to the Ohio State University in 1969 to earn his Ph.D. Fortunately, he was recruited to the College of Law where he was to remain for twenty years.

Thank you, Dean Henderson!

From the countless students, faculty, and staff who have been beneficiaries of your special concern and care, we thank you and wish you the very best in the years ahead.

Admissions Trends

by John P. Henderson, Associate Dean

The College of Law received 1,207 applications for the class that enrolled in August 1987. The 230 students who make up this year's entering class were selected from the largest group of applicants (2,099) ever to seek admission to the College of Law. This represents a 75 percent increase in applications in four years. Our experience at Ohio State is not unique; applications for admission to law schools have increased dramatically during the last few years. More than half of those who applied for admission throughout the country last year were not admitted to any law school.

There are a number of factors which explain the increased interest in and severe competition for a legal education: 1) the versatility of the law degree; 2) an increase in recent years in the percentage of college graduates seeking advanced degrees; 3) a significant number of persons wanting to change careers; and 4) a suppressed economy which has caused many of this year's very capable college graduates to attend law and graduate school rather than go into the work force.

The 1991 entering class is composed of about 45 percent women, and roughly 16 percent are minorities. The median age is 22; however, the average age is 24, which indicates that a large number of students in this class are in the 25 to 40 age range. It is also an academically strong class. The median LSAT is 40, about an 87th percentile score on this test, and the median GPA is 3.56.

While it may be a little too early to predict future trends, there is some evidence that applications may decline in the near future. The number of potential applicants who sat for the June administration of the new Law School Admission Test was down five percent compared to last year's corresponding administration; the October administration showed a two percent decline. The number of test takers has historically shown a strong correlation with the number of law school applicants. Another indicator is interest among pre-law students. The attendance at recruitment forums in New York, Atlanta, and Chicago was down slightly this fall, and the number of undergraduates in attendance at recruitment days on many college campuses has not been as large as last year.

We may have reached a peak with regard to the volume of applications received; however, admission to law schools will remain very competitive for some years to come. Clearly, the tuition and new building facilities at this law school will continue to attract a large and highly qualified pool of applicants.

New Development Director

Hof Named New Director

Thomas J. Hof (pronounced with a long "o") has been named Director of Development for the College of Law, succeeding John R. Meyer, who has taken a new position within the University Development Office. Hof, a native of Bowling Green, Ohio, comes to the College after a five-year stint as Director of Development and Alumni Affairs at the University of Cincinnati College of Law. He has also served as Director of Annual Giving at Illinois State University, and as Athletic Ticket Manager at the University of Kansas. Hof received both his bachelor and masters degrees from Bowling Green State University.

In announcing Hof's appointment, Dean Francis X. Beytagh remarked, "We are pleased to add someone of Tom's caliber and experience to our administrative staff. Tom comes to us after a very successful tenure at the University of Cincinnati College of Law. He has a proven track record in fundraising, and he will lead our efforts as we work to sustain the momentum generated during the Centennial Campaign."

When asked about his move to Buckeye country, Hof said, "I am pleased to join the College of Law at this exciting point in its history. The pride of our alumni in the College was strongly exhibited in the remarkable success of the Centennial Campaign."

Thomas J. Hof

Library News

Johnson Named New Director

The College of Law is pleased to announce that Professor Bruce S. Johnson, currently the Director of the University of South Carolina School of Law Library and Professor of Law, will assume the Law Library Director post in June of 1992.

Professor Johnson is a graduate of Amherst College, with a M.L.S. degree from Rutgers University. He received his J.D. degree from New York University in 1973, practiced law for several years, and then began his law library career at Seton Hall University School of Law in 1977. He served as the chief reference librarian at the University of Michigan School of Law for six years, and has been the Director at South Carolina since 1984. Professor Johnson is in contact with the College to familiarize himself with operations and to follow building progress.

Building on Tradition

Since mid-May, the open space of the north lawn and parking lots adjacent to the College of Law has given way to fences, trailers, backhoes, cranes, assorted equipment, and a regiment of workers. From deep excavations now rise walls and floors that give shape to the three-story, 95,000 square foot expansion of the Law Building. "It is exciting to see the new building take form and to grasp the reality of this long-planned improvement," says Professor Howard Fink, chair of the Planning Committee.

The project is a major undertaking. The coordination of the four principal contractors and oversight of daily progress has fallen to the capable hands of Dean Jack Henderson. "We are fortunate that Jack will be able to continue as the construction coordinator following his formal retirement as Associate Dean," said Dean Francis X. Beytagh.

The target date for occupancy of the addition will occur during the summer of 1992. "Once that move is accomplished," states Dean Henderson, "the contractor will begin in earnest the remodeling of the existing structure." The dedication of the completed addition and renovation is anticipated for the spring of 1993. The architectural firms involved in the entire project are Bohm-NBBJ of Columbus, Ohio, and Gunnar Birkerts and Associates of Birmingham, Michigan.

By the time of publication all floors of the addition will be connected and the basic structure in place. Completion of the addition is scheduled for early Summer when offices and library will be moved to the space. Renovation of the present building will then begin.*

Drinko Named Distinguished Alumnus

John and Elizabeth Drinko with citation

Alumni, University and other special guests, and friends gathered at an OSU Law Alumni Luncheon in Cleveland on Friday, October 18, to honor John Deaver Drinko '44 as the newest recipient of the College's prestigious Distinguished Alumnus Award. "Your long-standing interest in and generous support of the College of Law and the University make this a most deserved recognition," stated Dean Francis X. Beytagh in a letter prepared for the occasion which he was unable to attend because of illness.

Making the presentation on behalf of the College were Dean Joanne Wharton Murphy '58 and former Distinguished Alumnus Judge William K. Thomas '35. Also participating in the program were

Distinguished Alumni John D. Drinko and Thomas F. Patton '26

John Deaver Drinko '44 Distinguished Alumnus Career Highlights

*Native of St. Marys, West Virginia; B.A., 1942, Marshall University; and J.D., Order of the Coif, 1944, OSU College of Law.

*Member of the law firm of Baker & Hostetler, 1945; partner, 1955; managing partner, 1969; currently senior advisor to managing committee. Dominant force in the growth and subsequent national prominence of the firm; specialist in corporate law, including mergers and acquisitions.

*Businessman and civic leader whose judgment has been sought on boards of directors of six corporations and as a trustee of eight charitable foundations.

*Philanthropist through the establishment of the Elizabeth G. and John D. Drinko Foundation and support of higher education by the creation of seven chairs at six institutions, including the John D. Drinko-Baker & Hostetler Chair in Law at The Ohio State University.

*OSU alumni leader through service as member and chair of the National Council of the College of Law, member of the Executive Committee of the Presidents Club, director of the University Development Fund, and trustee for the University Foundation.

*Advocate of the College of Law through the establishment of the College's first fully-endowed chair and help in the establishment of the Newton D. Baker-Baker & Hostetler Chair in Law, the James E. Chapman-Baker & Hostetler Library Fund, and the Baker & Hostetler Building Fund. Early leadership gifts helped to set momentum for a successful Centennial Campaign.

*Recipient of six honorary degrees and other awards, including an LL.D., Distinguished Service Award, and Centennial Award from The Ohio State University, and recognition as a Fellow of the Cleveland Clinic Foundation.

David A. Ward '58, President of the Law Alumni Association, and Donald D. Glower, Vice President for Development. John Drinko made responding remarks about his career and commitment to higher education. Elizabeth G. Drinko accompanied her husband and was also recognized for her important supportive role in philanthropy.

A Tribute to Hayes

The name "Hayes" has an affectionate ring for contemporary alumni who recall the days of Coach Woody Hayes. But to the founders of the school of law, the Hayes of importance was Rutherford B. Hayes, former president of the United States and member and chair of the OSU Board of Trustees. President Hayes played a significant role in the efforts to establish and sustain the 1891 school of law.

As in most important events, many individuals collectively contributed to the establishment of formal instruction in law at Ohio State. The school's creation required initiatives of alumni, the support of then President W. H. Scott, the Board of Trustees, prominent local lawyers, and the County Commissioners who authorized use of the Franklin County Courthouse for classes. Nevertheless, President Hayes' support and political adeptness successfully guided the school through difficult obstacles.

To avoid a potential funding controversy, President Hayes won support for legal education by recommending in July of 1891 that a school of law be established and supported solely from student tuition, set at $60 per year.

Subsequently, he also helped to resolve a conflict between the law and University faculties regarding admission requirements. Perhaps his most significant contribution was his response to fiscal problems which threatened the closing of the school in late 1892. A personal gift of $300 and his resolution at the January 11, 1893, board meeting for annual funding of $1,500 for the law school enabled the continuation of instruction. His unexpected death in 1893 was a true loss to the University.

The College had a recent opportunity at the October 18 alumni luncheon in Cleveland to acknowledge President Hayes' contributions. A citation of appreciation was presented to Webb C. Hayes III, great-grandson of President Hayes and partner in the Washington, D.C., office of Baker & Hostetler. The citation read in part, "The faith of Rutherford B. Hayes in formal legal education at The Ohio State University has been justified by the century of growth and service of the College of Law as it continues to be the proud beneficiary of his early support." For this occasion, a generous gift was made by John D. Drinko '44 in the name of the College of Law to the Rutherford B. Hayes Library in Fremont, Ohio.

Placement Points

by Pamela H. Lombardi, Director of Placement

This has been an extraordinary year for placement. The bad news is that this is the tightest legal market in a decade. The good news is that Ohio State students continue to be marketable in the Midwest and beyond.

To date, approximately 76% of 1991 graduates have responded to our Placement Survey. Final class statistics will soon be available. Of those responding, 75% report placement. Among them are 17 judicial clerks serving in a variety of federal courts, as well as state supreme and appellate courts from Pennsylvania to Indiana and from Wisconsin to Texas.

Ohio State graduates are well represented in virtually every legal environment. In legal services, we have 1991 graduates with the New York Legal Aid Society's Criminal Defense Division and the Federal Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation. Among the 100-plus attorney firms, we have graduates in Washington, DC; Chicago, IL; Los Angeles, CA; Boston, MA; and throughout Ohio. Most graduates joining small- and medium-size firms remained in the Midwest, but there are exceptions, including Raleigh, NC; Phoenix, AZ; and Tampa, FL.

OSU students fill nine of the eleven positions in the CBA/Minority Clerkship program.

Students research perspective employers during fall interviews.

This record of accomplishment in the job market was a cooperative effort of the law school community. Anticipating a downturn, Dean Beytagh encouraged faculty members to work one-on-one with students in the job search. Faculty members wrote letters of introduction and recommendation, critiqued resumes and correspondence, and gave generously of their time and expertise. Alumni returned to the school to conduct workshops on interviewing skills and a variety of employment topics. Students successful in the job search served as in-house mentors for peers. Extraordinary times require extraordinary effort, and all members of the Ohio State community rose to the occasion.

Having learned the value of collective effort from last year's experience, we approached the 1991 on-campus interviewing season with new programs in place. The Columbus Bar Association, Ohio State, and Capital University initiated a pre-interviewing season practice interview program. Students were matched with volunteer attorneys who conducted in-firm practice interviews followed by a 30-minute critique of interviewing skills. In addition, the Columbus Bar Association offered a half-day

Interviewing Skills Workshop for law students based on a curriculum designed by Ohio State and Capital and featuring many OSU alumni as speakers.

LEXIS and WESTLAW representatives provided computerized job prospecting training for students in August and September. A "Welcome Back Pack," designed to teach law students how to research firms manually and containing firm brochures for all firms visiting campus, was made available to every second- and third-year student. Recognizing how difficult the legal job market would be this year, students put extra effort into firm research. Typical of employer feedback about OSU's fall on-campus interviewing program was, "This was the strongest slate of candidates which I have interviewed on-campus at any time," from a firm in southern Ohio.

Students looked at more employers and a greater variety of employers than in years past. In addition to on-campus interviewing, students attended a variety of national recruitment conferences, ranging from a patent job fair in Chicago in August to a public interest recruitment conference in Washington, D.C., in October. Ohio State students went where the employers were. Government employers received more applications from Ohio State, and eight students are semi-finalists for the U.S. Department of Justice Honors Program. Public interest employers from New York, Chicago, and Cleveland are considering Ohio State candidates in larger numbers as well.

Despite the good news of better-prepared students being assisted in the employment process by more people and programs, the job market remains tight. Until the economy improves significantly, legal jobs will be in short supply and students will have to pursue aggressively every opportunity to remain marketable.

College Sets 1992 Forum Lectures

The Frank R. Strong Law Forum lecture program for 1992 will be expanded to a series of three lectures beginning March 5 and continuing March 12 and April 2. In keeping with the College's own centennial celebrations, the Strong Lectures will focus on the bicentennial of the Bill of Rights, which was ratified exactly 100 years prior to the founding of the College in 1891. Both institutions have experienced profound change and challenge during the past 100 years.

Professor Kent R. Greenawalt, Cardozo Professor of Jurisprudence at Columbia University Law School, will deliver the first lecture on March 5. He is one of the nation's most respected constitutional law scholars on the First Amendment. The Honorable Damon J. Keith, United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, will lecture March 12 on the role of the federal judiciary in the preservation and interpretation of the Bill of Rights. Judge Damon is serving as chair of the Judicial Conference Commission on the Bicentennial of the Bill of Rights. The third lecture on April 2 will be delivered by The Honorable Shirley S. Abrahamson, Supreme Court of Wisconsin. She will discuss the Bill of Rights and federalism from the perspective of the state courts. Judge Abrahamson has served on the Supreme Court since 1976.

1991 Strong Lecture

Professor Martha L. Fineman, Columbia University Law School, presented the 1991 Frank R. Strong Lecture entitled "Feminist Theory in Law—The Difference It Makes." In preparation for her visit, students were asked to read her recent publication, "Challenging Law, Establishing Differences: The Future of Feminist Legal Scholars," 42 Florida Law Review 25 (1990). Professor Fineman enjoyed her interactions with students, faculty, and other lecture guests. She also met with students at a brown bag the day following her lecture to further exchange ideas and answer questions. During her visit, she met with several women's groups within the University.

Centennial Activities Continue

College to Sponsor Tour

The College of Law will sponsor a Heritage Tour to London and Oxford, England, from June 10–20, 1992. The tour, part of the College's Centennial observances, will be led by Dean Francis X. Beytagh. The tour will include airfare, hotel accommodations, ground transportation, guided tours, visits to the Inns of Court and familiar common law landmarks, and special social events. Details are set out on page 32. An initial downpayment of $300 must accompany each reservation, and payment in full will be due no later than April 1, 1992. Approximate tour cost is $2,925 per person.

United States Supreme Court, is expected to participate.

College Sponsors Supreme Court Admission

Alumni interested in group admission to the U.S. Supreme Court Bar to be moved by Dean Francis X. Beytagh in chambers on Monday, June 22, 1992, are requested to notify the College of Law Alumni Office by letter or telephone, (614) 292-2937. Applicants who are active members in good standing of a state bar for more than three years immediately preceding application are eligible for admission. The admission fee is $100, and a general processing fee of $25 will be charged for all admission-related expenses.

Requests for application must be received by March 15, 1992, for timely processing. Group admission is limited in number by the Supreme Court, so selections will be made on a first come–first served basis as of February 1. All travel arrangements are left to individual management. The trip will include an optional Sunday evening reception and opportunities for sightseeing.

Alumni participating in the group-sponsored admission in May 1990 were most enthusiastic about the experience. The College looks forward to this activity as part of the 1991–1992 Centennial celebrations.

Other Upcoming Events

The College is in the process of organizing a conference on "Business and Trade with the European Community—1992 and Beyond" for Friday, April 24. Various experts on EC trade will update activities and proposed changes within the European Community and will provide lawyers with specific information needed for client representation. The College is also working with the law faculty of the University of Genoa, Italy, for a meeting on comparative constitutional law in mid-September. Associate Justice Antonin Scalia,

Burger to Visit

Warren E. Burger, former Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, will be the principal speaker at the College's Hooding Ceremony for graduates on Sunday, May 10, 1992. Chief Justice Burger is completing his important leadership as chair of the Commission on the Bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution. His visit is an important part of the College's year-long centennial observances. Chief Justice Burger will receive at the ceremony an honorary LL.D. to be conferred by the Board of Trustees and invested by President E. Gordon Gee. Approximately 200 graduates will participate in the ceremony to be held in Mershon Auditorium.

College Adds Three To Faculty Ranks

The College of Law is pleased to welcome three outstanding additions to its faculty. All of them bring stellar credentials and solid experience in private practice to their new roles as professors of law. These additions bring the number of full-time faculty to 38.

Professor Edward B. Foley

Edward B. Foley

A native of New York City, Edward B. Foley graduated in 1983 from Yale College with a B.A., magna cum laude, in History. While at Yale, he earned the J. Edward Meeker Essay Prize in English, and served as publisher and senior editor of the International Forum from 1981-83.

Sparked by his interest in international law, Foley went on to attend Columbia Law School. A Harlan Fiske Stone Scholar for all of his law school years, he also earned the Robert Noxon Toppin Prize in Constitutional Law and the Class of 1912 Prize in Contracts in addition to serving as Writing & Research Editor of the Columbia Law Review. Law school, however, threw Professor Foley a curve. "I went to law school to study international law, but when I got there I fell in love with constitutional law. I took every course in constitutional law Columbia offered. And when I started to fall in love with constitutional law, I started to think about teaching."

After law school, Foley spent one year clerking for Judge Patricia M. Wald, then Chief Judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit. He went on to spend a year working in private practice in Washington, D.C., before serving as a law clerk to United States Supreme Court Justice Harry A. Blackmun. "It was a very challenging and rewarding year" despite the rigorous schedule, observed Foley.

After completing his clerkship, Foley again delved into the world of private practice, this time as an associate with the Washington, D.C., firm of Jenner & Block. "I was very fortunate to find firms which allowed me to practice constitutional law," admitted the new professor. While in practice, he worked on a variety of cases, including participating in a public school's defense against a free-exercise-of-religion challenge to its core curriculum. The case, Mozert v. Board of Education, involved a challenge to the textbooks that were being used in Tennessee's public schools.

"Constitutional law is like philosophy in action. Both the theory and the practice are blended into one," Foley remarked. "The Constitution belongs to all American citizens. I know that not every lawyer is going to practice constitutional law, but I think their knowledge of constitutional law makes them better lawyers and better civic leaders. My role [as an educator] is to transmit the culture of the Constitution."

He is teaching a course on Religion and the Constitution in the fall, and first-year Constitutional Law in the spring. Next fall, he plans to add a course on Law and the Political Process.

Professor Kathy Seward Northern

Kathy Seward Northern

Kathy Seward Northern is no stranger to Columbus. The youngest of five children, Northern attended high school at Columbus School for Girls. From there, she went on to undergraduate study at Williams College, a small college in the northwest corner of Massachusetts. While at Williams, she was a Tyng Scholar and a member of the Gargoyle Student Honor Society before graduating with a B.A. in Political Science and Psychology in 1980.

"I always knew I would go to graduate school. Since I liked to read and to be exposed to a lot of different subjects, I thought law school would be a natural choice," revealed Northern. She attended Harvard University Law School, earning her juris doctor degree in 1983. While at Harvard, she served as chairperson of the Board of Student Advisors, which had responsibility for administration of first-year orientation, first-year and upper level moot court competitions, student-administration liaison tasks, and the Jessup International Moot Court Competition. She also served as vice president and academic advisor of the Black Law Students Association.

Northern returned to central Ohio upon graduation to serve as a law clerk to the Honorable Robert M. Duncan '52, then a judge of the United States District Court for the Southern District of Ohio. "Judge Duncan was an excellent teacher. He really encouraged us to form our own legal conclusions about the cases after reading the file, the briefs, and doing any additional research we thought was necessary."

She then spent about five years in private practice with the Columbus office of Porter, Wright, Morris & Arthur. While she enjoyed her experience in litigation, Northern found that "in practice, I couldn't get in depth into some issues as much as I wanted."

Northern received an offer to work as an adjunct professor of law at Ohio Northern University, so she taught Products Liability Law during fall semester 1989. This led to a permanent offer of employment as an Assistant Professor, and she taught Products Liability Law, Contracts, and Appellate Advocacy during the 1990-91 school year.

Now at Ohio State, Northern will teach Torts, Products Liability, and a course on environmental torts. "I enjoy teaching first-year students. It is good for a new professor—I have an appreciation for some of the anxiety they are experiencing. The students and I share a sense of anticipation and excitement about embarking on a new process," stated Northern.

Always active in civic affairs, she is "looking forward to getting reinvolved in Columbus's community activities." She was recently appointed by Judge John D. Holschuh to the Judicial Advisory Committee for the Southern District of Ohio, which was formed pursuant to the Judicial Act of 1990. According to the Act, every district must appoint a panel from a representative cross section of the bar to help advise the court on ways to facilitate litigation in federal courts.

Professor Nancy B. Rapoport

Nancy B. Rapoport

Nancy B. Rapoport brings several years of practical experience to her teaching of Contracts, Debtor-Creditor Law, and related commercial law courses.

A native of Orange, Texas, she graduated summa cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa from Rice University with a B.A. in Legal Studies and Honors Psychology. She received her J.D. from Stanford Law School in 1985, where she served as Note Editor for the Stanford Law Review and vice president of alumni programs. While she was at Stanford, she spent her free time acting as a technical assistant in various plays and competing in intramural powerlifting.

Rapoport went on to serve for one year as a law clerk for the Honorable Joseph T. Sneed, United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. Since 1986, she has been associated with the large San Francisco law firm of Morrison & Foerster, concentrating primarily in bankruptcy litigation and transactional work.

"I always thought of going into teaching, even during law school. I worked at a great firm, and I enjoyed it, but I had no time to read the things I wanted to read and think about the things I wanted to think about," observed Rapoport.

She is also very pleased to have the opportunity to do in-depth, scholarly research. Her current scholarship involves the interrelationships between bankruptcy and ethics. More specifically, she is studying the difficulties in the rules regarding conflicts of interest as alignments change in the progression of a bankruptcy case. She is also finishing an oral history of Judge Sneed. Her future research interests include interdisciplinary approaches to bankruptcy issues (e.g., statistical research and game theory).

Rapoport is happy to explain why she chose Ohio State to begin her teaching career. "The faculty here is tremendous. There are a lot of truly gifted people here, who are also very outgoing. I honestly thought I would get better just by being around them."

In her infrequent off hours, Rapoport fills her time with movies, black and white photography, cross-country skiing, and ballroom and Latin dancing.

Visiting Professors Enrich OSU

The academic environment of The Ohio State University College of Law has been enriched recently by the visits of two outstanding professors. Professor Craig A. McEwen is teaching a seminar currently, and Professor Michael J. Saks was here as a visitor during the past spring semester.

Professor Craig A. McEwen

Craig A. McEwen

Professor McEwen is the visitor holding the John D. Drinko-Baker & Hostetler Chair for the 1991 Autumn Semester. While here at Ohio State, he taught a seminar on Alternative Dispute Resolution in the fall, while working with faculty across the University on dispute resolution research. In the spring, he will remain at the College of Law while on sabbatical leave from Bowdoin College. An expert in the field of alternative dispute resolution, Professor McEwen has been gratified to observe that, "Ohio is one of the liveliest centers in the United States for innovation in dispute resolution. It's fascinating to learn what is happening here."

A social scientist by profession, he is currently the Daniel B. Fayerweather Professor of Sociology at Bowdoin College. Professor McEwen has served for a total of five years as Chair of Bowdoin's Department of Sociology and Anthropology, and as Assistant Dean of the Faculty (1985-87) and Acting Dean of the Faculty (1987-88).

After graduating Phi Beta Kappa from Oberlin College with an A.B., summa cum laude and with highest honors in sociology, he continued his studies at Harvard University, earning an A.M. in 1969 and a Ph.D. in Sociology in 1975. While at Harvard, he was the recipient of a Danforth Graduate Fellowship, a competitive fellowship awarded to students interested in becoming college professors.

Professor McEwen became interested in how legal rules shape human behavior while working his senior year of college with an Oberlin faculty member at the University of Hawaii's Social Science Research Institute, and his interest has continued all of his professional life. Among his numerous scholarly works is a book entitled, Mediation: Law, Policy and Practice, coauthored with Professor Nancy H. Rogers, which earned the 1989 Book Prize from the Center for Public Resources.

He is currently conducting a study of the difference in practice procedures between divorce lawyers in Maine (where there is mandatory mediation on all issues if minor children are involved in the divorce) and New Hampshire (where there is no mandatory mediation program). He is also working on an evaluation of an experimental mediation program in two Maine Superior Courts in which the courts agreed to assign cases randomly either to mediation or the regular trial docket.

Professor Michael J. Saks

Michael J. Saks

Professor Saks returned to Buckeye territory for a one-semester visit during Spring Semester 1991. Visiting here from the University of Iowa College of Law, Saks taught a Forensic Science Seminar and a Law and Social Science Seminar to rave student reviews. Although he does not hold a Juris Doctor degree, he is a 1975 alumnus of Ohio State with a Ph.D. in Social Psychology, and he also holds a Master of Studies in Law degree from Yale Law School.

Faculty colloquia visitors address "Psychology and Law in China Today."

"For me, it has been a special treat to come back to Ohio State in a different form, as a professor rather than as a student," said Saks. "When I was a graduate student here, I did my doctoral dissertation on a problem brought to my attention by a law student—the effect of jury size on decision-making." Professor Stanley K. Laughlin, Jr., helped him put together the mock trial he used for testing purposes. His dissertation was published as a book and has been cited in several United States Supreme Court opinions.

He enjoyed his semester with OSU students as well. "I think the students are terrific here. I've found them to be a bright and spirited group, and they've been good to me."

While here, Professor Saks worked on a research project regarding law and social science. More particularly, he is looking into the "New Evidence Scholarship," especially law and forensic science, and challenging some assumptions and assertions that lawyers and courts have let pass unchallenged for generations. He is also working on some empirical research on the behavior of the tort litigation system.

Staff Excellence Awards

Dean Beytagh presented the 1991 Staff Excellence Awards to Carole L. Hinchcliff, Acquisition and Collection Development Librarian, and Dorothy A. (Dottie) Hall, Secretarial Supervisor. A reception in their honor was held at the College. Dottie Hall retired from the College in October and has been replaced by Carol Peirano, who moves to this position from the Legal Clinic.

Faculty Highlights

Mary Beth Beazley, Director of Legal Writing, chaired a session on "Evaluating Student Writing Assignments" at the most recent National Conference of the Legal Writing Institute in Ann Arbor, Michigan. In July, she presented "Using the Private Memo to Communicate With Student Writers" at the Midwestern Legal Writing Conference in Valparaiso, Indiana. She has recently coauthored an article entitled "Teaching Students 'How to Think Like Lawyers': Integrating Socratic Method With the Writing Process," which will appear as the lead article in Volume 64, Number 4 of Temple Law Review.

Francis X. Beytagh attended the American Bar Association's Annual "Deans' Workshop" in Seattle in February and participated on a panel regarding law school fundraising campaigns. He also organized and co-chaired the Annual Ohio Bench/Bar/Deans Retreat in Millersburg, Ohio, in February.

Dean Beytagh also chaired a special university-wide commission on enhancing Ohio State's role in international programs and activities and submitted the group's report to Provost Frederick E. Hutchinson in June.

Dean Beytagh was recognized at the Ohio State Bar Association's annual meeting in Cincinnati last May, upon completing six years of service on the Board of Trustees of the Ohio Continuing Legal Education Institute.

He attended the American Bar Association annual meeting in Atlanta and spoke at an Atlanta law alumni luncheon in August. On September 26, he served as a panelist at a Columbus Bar Association program on "Professionalism."

Howard P. Fink has finished work on the manuscript for Ohio Rules of Civil Procedure—With Commentary, with Professors Charles E. Wilson and Arthur F. Greenbaum of our faculty, to be published later in 1991 by the Michie Company. A labor of more than three years, it will be the first book of its kind to gather the reported and the salient unreported cases interpreting the Ohio Rules of Civil Procedure since the Rules were adopted in 1970. It has required the authors and a small army of student research assistants to sift through and read thousands of cases decided in the past twenty-one years.

In March, Professor Fink attended a meeting to plan a forthcoming workshop on Probate and Trust Law for the Association of American Law Schools.

This summer, he again taught in the Ohio State/University of Oxford Pre-Law Program at Somerville College, Oxford, United Kingdom.

He remains as chair of the College's Planning Committee, watching with satisfaction the building of the College's new building addition, the culmination of six years of planning.

Arthur F. Greenbaum spoke in August at the orientation program for the College of Law's newest entering class. He presented a lecture entitled "Introduction to the American Court and Legal System." In September Professor Greenbaum served as the moderator for the College of Law

Centennial Continuing Legal Education Program on Legal Ethics. His book, The Ohio Rules of Civil Procedure—With Commentary, which he coauthored with Professors Fink and Wilson, will be published by The Michie Company in December 1991. Next semester he will begin work on a treatise concerning the Ohio Code of Professional Responsibility.

Sheldon W. Halpern published two articles in June. "The 'Inviolable Personality'—Warren and Brandeis After One Hundred Years: Introduction to a Symposium on the Right of Privacy," appearing in 10 University of Northern Illinois Law Review 387, broadly introduces discussion of the right of privacy on the 100th anniversary of the article which brought it into being. "Rethinking the Right of Privacy: Dignity, Decency, and the Law's Limitations," 43 Rutgers-Newark Law Review 539, was solicited in honor of the late Edward Bloustein, and raises the issue of the systemic capability to deal with the essential privacy right.

Professor Halpern spoke to a symposium sponsored by the Center for Advanced Study in Telecommunications in May. His topic was "Telecommunications Networks: Issues in Law, Security and Policy." He also taught a continuing legal education course in copyright law for The Ohio State University this past spring. In addition, Professor Halpern completed an extensive updating supplement to his casebook on Defamation, Privacy, Publicity and "Moral Right." The supplement was published and distributed by Anderson Publishing Company in September. He has also completed the manuscript (with his coauthors) of a casebook, Copyright, to be published by West Publishing Company.

L. Camille Hébert published an article in the Boston College Law Review in December 1990 titled "Redefining the Burdens of Proof in Title VII Litigation: Will the Disparate Impact Theory Survive Wards Cove and the Civil Rights Act of 1990?" The article focuses on the change in the burdens of proof with respect to claims under the disparate impact theory and the implications of those changes for future cases. Congressional efforts to change the Supreme Court decision that reallocated the burdens of proof are also addressed. She also wrote a chapter on Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 for the Kansas Employment Law Handbook, published by the Kansas Bar Association in September 1991.

Professor Hébert testified before the Ohio Senate Commerce and Labor Committee on May 8, 1991, concerning the federal Civil Rights Act of 1991 and the Ohio companion bill, Senate Bill No. 7. She explained to the committee the present state of both federal and state law on discrimination in employment and the implications of the pending federal and state legislation.

Also on May 8, Professor Hébert made a presentation to the Ohio AFL-CIO Community Services Conference in Columbus, Ohio, regarding "The Legal Aspects of Drug Testing."

Lawrence Herman spoke on recent developments in criminal procedure at a January workshop for judges of the Sixth and Eighth Circuits at Charleston, South Carolina.

In April, he judged the final round of the first-year Moot Court competition. He spoke on the death penalty at the annual meeting of the North Central Chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union of Ohio at Oberlin College. Also in April, he attended a reunion of College of Law alumni who were active in the moot court program during Professor Herman's thirty years as advisor to the program.

In August, he spoke at the orientation program for first-year students. In September, he was master of ceremonies at the dinner commemorating the centennial of the College.

Professor Herman has completed an article on interrogation and the admissibility of confessions. He is now working on a criminal procedure casebook.

Timothy S. Jost is the coauthor of four books which were published in June. These include Health Law: Cases, Materials and Problems, 2d Ed., published by West Publishing Company, and three smaller casebooks based on materials taken from the larger book, covering medical malpractice litigation, medical-legal ethics, and health care organization and finance. Professor Jost also recently completed the manuscript of a property casebook he is coauthoring for spring 1992 publication by West. The property casebook is designed to permit the teaching of professional ethics and alternative dispute resolution in the first-year property course.

Professor Jost has also completed an article on Medicare Peer Review Organizations which has been published in the Puget Sound Law Review. A chapter on legal issues involving long-term care facilities, authored by Professor Jost, appeared in Health Care Facilities Law, published by Little, Brown earlier this year. Finally, he gave a presentation at the Law and Society Conference in Amsterdam in June regarding a project he is developing. In the project, Professor Jost is studying complaints submitted to the State Medical Board of Ohio, of which he is currently the Supervising Member.

Joan M. Krauskopf is producing and editing others' chapters for the second edition of Advocacy for the Aging, originally published by West Publishing Company.

Professor Krauskopf has been selected to serve as a member of the Ohio Supreme Court and Ohio State Bar Association Steering Committee for the Task Force on Gender Fairness in the Profession. She has been appointed chair of the subcommittee on Gender Issues in the Law Schools, which will be surveying law students and interviewing faculty at all nine law schools in Ohio.

She attended the annual May meeting of the American Law Institute in San Francisco and is an advisor to the Institute's Project on Family Dissolution, which met for extensive deliberations in October 1991. She was elected Chair-Elect of the American Association of Law Schools Section on Aging and the Law at the annual meeting in January and has arranged the 1992 annual meeting program. She continues as a member of the national executive board of the Order of the Coif.

Professor Krauskopf continued her extensive service to Ohio State as Chair of the Provost's Committee on Probationary Period Exclusion. In late winter and spring she conducted public hearings, completed the final report, and testified before the Faculty Senate Committee on Academic Freedom and Responsibility. The Faculty Senate adopted the rule and the Board of Trustees approved it to be effective for people on the tenure track as of October 1, 1991.

In June, Professor Krauskopf completed her year as Chair of The Ohio State University Council on Academic Excellence for Women. During her tenure as chair, she organized a conference and wrote a booklet for science administrators and faculty on retaining women in science at Ohio State. This year she continues to serve as an active member of the University Commission on Women.

Her civic involvements include service as a member of the First Unitarian-Universalist Church Board of Trustees, and the Committees on the Ministry and Worship. Effective July 1, she was elected Church Moderator.

Professor Krauskopf gave a presentation with Professor Timothy S. Jost to the College of Law faculty at a colloquium on April 26 concerning the right to die and medical decisions. On May 7, she spoke in Columbus on "Recent Legal Issues in Sexual Harassment and Peer Harassment" at a conference of the Affirmative Action Panel of the Committee on Institutional Cooperation, which is composed of all Ohio colleges and Big Ten Universities.

Stanley K. Laughlin, Jr., spent July and parts of June and August in Oxford, England, where he directed and taught in the University of Oxford-Ohio State University Summer Law Program. Prior to that he attended the International Law & Society Conference in Amsterdam, The Netherlands. His article, "Constitutional Structure of the Courts of the United States Territories: the Case of American Samoa," was published this autumn in 13 University of Hawaii Law Review 379.

Lee M. Modjeska is currently writing a personal memoir, a book on labor law, and an article on the current Supreme Court Term. His article, "The Supreme Court and the Duty of Fair Representation," will be published in the Ohio State Journal on Dispute Resolution. In June he received his black belt in taekwondo.

Earl Finbar Murphy has continued as chair of the College's Special Programs Committee. The committee's proposal for a graduate LL.M. program in the law of banking, insurance, and financial institutions was approved by the faculty of the College on November 28, 1990, and formally submitted for University consideration on March 4, 1991. The initial notice of intent has been approved by the Curriculum Committee of the University Council on Research and Graduate Studies, the Acting Vice President for the Office of Research, and the Provost, and was submitted on May 15, 1991, to the Ohio Board of Regents.

Professor Murphy completed his one volume contribution on quantitative groundwater law to Waters and Water Rights, 1992 Edition, to be published in a seven-volume edition by The Michie Company. He continues to serve on the Wayne Nichols Memorial Lecture Committee in the University's School of Natural Resources and on the Board of Visitors of the Indiana University School of Law at Indianapolis.

He served Winter Quarter 1991 on the Graduate School Committee for the Ohio Board of Regents' Fellowships, spoke to the Columbus Chapter of the World Federalists on "International Environmental Law," spoke on the concept of the "World Garden (Ecumenekepos) in International Law" to a course on the Global Environment in the School of Natural Resources, participated on the College of Law's Centennial Planning Committee, served as a member of the University's Urban Affairs Committee, continued as the advisor to the College's Environmental Law Association, and remained active in the legal fraternity, Phi Delta Phi. He continues to be Courtesy Professor of Natural Resources in the College of Agriculture and a member of the faculty of the Atmospheric Sciences Program at the University.

The Centennial Class of the College of Law chose Professor Murphy as the Outstanding Professor of the Year, and he delivered a response at the Hooding Ceremony on May 11, 1991. He stated that the honor came to him most unexpectedly and was received by him with the greatest gratitude.

He remains active in the World Society for Ekistics, headquartered in Athens, Greece, and such other organizations as the Société Jean Bodin, the International Water Law Association, the Law and Society Association.

John B. Quigley has published nine recent works. "The Rule of Non-Inquiry and the Impact of Human Rights on Extradition Law," 15 North Carolina Journal of International Law and Commercial Regulation 401 (1990), challenges the accepted learning that federal courts in international extradition cases give no regard to the possibility that the extraditee may be tortured or otherwise mistreated if surrendered to the requesting country.

"The Presumption of Innocence and American Law" (in Russian), 1990 Soviet State and Law (Moscow) 156 (No. 9), disputes a previous article in the same journal by Professor George Fletcher of Columbia Law School, who argued that the United States Supreme Court decision in Martin v. Ohio, which permitted a state to require the accused in a homicide case to prove self-defense by a preponderance of the evidence, does not violate the concept of the presumption of innocence.

"Enforcement of Human Rights in U.S. Courts: The Trial of Persons Kidnapped Abroad," in Mark Gibney (ed.), World Justice? U.S. Courts and International Human Rights, Westview Press, 1990, pp. 59-80, contests a recent policy determination by the federal government that it is appropriate for U.S. law enforcement officials to capture a suspect in a foreign country without consultation with local authorities, and to transport the suspect to the United States. The article argues that in such a situation the internationally protected rights of the suspect are violated, and that a U.S. court should decline jurisdiction.

"Law Reform and the Soviet Courts," in Legal Reform in the USSR, Transnational Juris Publications, 1991, pp. 59-75, analyzes legislative efforts in the Soviet Union to strengthen the independence of the judiciary.

"A panamai invázió; es a nemzetközi törvényesség" (The Panama Invasion and International Legality) (in Hungarian), Letünk, No. 1-2 (1991), pp. 118-146, contests the arguments made by the U.S. State Department to justify the 1989 invasion of Panama. Letünk is a Hungarian-language political science journal published in Yugoslavia.

"The United States, the Security Council, and the Gulf War," Guild Practitioner, Vol. 48, No. 2 (1991), pp. 58-68, argues that the United Nations violated its Charter in authorizing military action against Iraq, because it failed to determine the inadequacy of economic sanctions, and because it failed to maintain control over the military action taken by the U.S. and other states.

"Strangers in Strange Lands: Extradition from Foreign Jurisdictions in Capital Cases" (with S. Adele Shank), The Champion (National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers), July 1991, pp. 33-35, examines the practice of certain foreign states of refusing to extradite to the United States persons wanted on capital charges.

"The Soviet Presidency," American Journal of Comparative Law, Vol. 39, No. 1 (1991), pp. 67-93, analyzes the powers of the recently established presidency in the Soviet Union.

"Freedom of Expression in the Soviet Media," Loyola Entertainment Law Journal, Vol. 11, No. 2 (1991), pp. 269-92, examines Soviet legislation connected with the glasnost policy that broadens freedom of expression in the mass media.

Professor Quigley authored op-ed pieces in the San Francisco Chronicle, Cleveland Plain Dealer, and Des Moines Register on the Persian Gulf War. He spoke to numerous organizations about the Persian Gulf War and its ramifications, including giving a keynote address at a conference on the Middle East War at Loyola University in New Orleans entitled, "International Human Rights Law in the Iraqi War."

On April 5, Professor Quigley gave a lecture on "The Legality of the Biological Defense Research Program" at the Maryland Biotechnology Institute, University of Maryland (Baltimore). The following day he was in Dayton, Ohio, giving a presentation at the University of Dayton on "International Remedies for the Palestinians." On April 20, he made a panel presentation at the annual meeting of the American Society of International Law in Washington, D.C., concerning "Self-Determination Rights of Palestinians in Israel and Selected Arab States." He spoke on "Peace in the Middle East" at John Carroll University on April 29, and on "Realignment in the Middle East after the Gulf War" at the Columbus Metropolitan Club on May 15.

Rhonda R. Rivera was honored with two awards in the spring of 1991. She received the Distinguished Affirmative Action Award from The Ohio State University on May 6 "in recognition of proven commitment to the positive spirit of affirmative action and outstanding leadership in the promotion of equal opportunity and equal treatment for all persons at this University and for society as a whole." On June 15, she was the recipient of the Michael Howard Greer Humanitarian Award, in recognition of her work as a board member for Lambda Legal Defense and Education Fund, her presidency of the Ohio Human Rights Bar Association, and her commitment to the education of the judiciary of Ohio regarding discrimination against persons with AIDS.

In addition, she has published a book chapter and two arbitration decisions. Professor Rivera authored a chapter on "Sexual Orientation and the Law" in Homosexuality: Research Implications for Public Policy, Gonsiorek & Weinrich (eds.), Sage, 1991. The two arbitration decisions are: Ohio Department of Rehabilitation and Corrections and Ohio Civil Service Employees' Association, Local 11, AFSCME, AFL-CIO, 93 LA 1186 (January 1990) and Propipe Corporation and Amalgamated Local 804, International Union of Electronics, Electrical, Technical, Salaried & Machine Workers, AFL-CIO, 91-1-ARB ¶ 8145 (March 1990).

She has given several lectures in the past few months. She spoke on sexual orientation and the law to the Ohio Judicial College and to attendees of a Cultural Diversity Program at the Hale Black Cultural Center. "Gay and Lesbian Legal Issues" was the topic of a lecture Professor Rivera gave for the Rehabilitation Services Commission of Ohio. In May, she served as a panelist at a spring teaching assistant forum for The Ohio State University Center for Teaching Excellence.

CBA President Charles A. Warner '70 and OSBA President Richard Markus talk with Dean Beytagh during noon program for students.

Nancy H. Rogers completed the manuscript for the 1991 supplement to her treatise, Mediation: Law, Policy, Practice (coauthored with Craig A. McEwen). The supplement was published by Clark Boardman Callahan in late summer.

She was elected Chair of the Association of American Law Schools (AALS) Section on Alternative Dispute Resolution (ADR) and to the Board of Directors of the American Arbitration Association. She has also been appointed Vice Chairman of the Ohio Supreme Court Dispute Resolution Committee.

Professor Rogers gave panel or individual presentations at the National Conference on Emerging ADR Issues at Harvard Law School on April 18; the Clinical Section and ADR Section programs at the AALS Annual Meeting in Washington, D.C., on January 3 and 5; the AALS Workshop on Clinical Legal Education in Washington, D.C., on May 4; the Vermont Judicial Conference in Vermont on June 4; a program for lawyers at Ohio Northern University College of Law in March; an Ohio State University Continuing Legal Education Seminar on May 31; and a meeting of the Ohio Association of Law Librarians in Cincinnati in May.

Michael D. Rose was recently elected a fellow of The American College of Trust and Estate Counsel. The College, formerly known as The American College of Probate Counsel, is composed of more than 2,600 of the finest estate planning practitioners in the United States and Canada, together with some 45 distinguished law professors from across the country.

Morgan E. Shipman spoke in March to the Cleveland Securities Institute concerning the omnibus tender offer legislation enacted in Ohio in 1990.

Professor Shipman continues as an active member of the Corporation Law Committee of the Ohio State Bar Association. He is a member of the Subcommittees on Tender Offers, State Securities Regulation, and Limited Liability Companies. He also remains a member of the Board of Editors of the Ohio Lawyer magazine.

Gregory M. Travalio participated in a symposium at Capital University Law School on "Reform in Intercollegiate Athletics" on April 10. During Operation Desert Shield/Desert Storm, Dean Travalio presented a Columbus Bar Association-sponsored program on "The Soldiers and Sailors Civil Relief Act and Veterans Reemployment Rights." He has been elected to a position on the University Legislative Affairs Committee by the University Faculty Council. In October, he gave a presentation on Real Estate Contracts to a conference of central Ohio real estate agents and brokers.

In December 1990, Associate Dean Travalio was selected for promotion to Lieutenant Colonel, Judge Advocate General's Corps, United States Army Reserve.

David Williams, II was recently elected to a three-year term as a member of the University Faculty Senate and to a two-year term on the Faculty Senate Rules Committee. In June, OSU President E. Gordon Gee appointed him to a four-year term as a member of the University Athletic Council.

Professor Williams completed a tax portfolio for the Bureau of National Affairs in May. His topic was "Constructive Ownership and Related Party Rules," concerning taxable transfers. In July, Professor Williams gave testimony before the United State Senate Finance Committee regarding the enactment of the Bentsen-Roth IRA Bill.

Recently, Professor Williams was elected to serve as a member of the Board of Directors of the Northside Development Corporation, a nonprofit corporation providing low-income housing in Columbus.

Within the past three years, students have accepted judicial clerkships at the U.S. Supreme Court, U.S. Tax Court, five circuits of the U.S. Court of Appeals, and twelve different U.S. District Courts in addition to numerous appointments in state courts.*

Rites of Passage for the Class of 1991

Attired in their purple, velvet-trimmed academic gowns, nearly 200 law graduates began the transition from student to lawyer on May 11 as the College held its spring Hooding Ceremony in Mershon Auditorium. Family and friends shared the students' enthusiasm and excitement at these rites of passage.

Inspiring words by Judge Patricia McGowan Wald, United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, challenged the emerging lawyers to be active "players" in the game of life. She urged them not to cede to others the governance, rules, and goals of their work as lawyers. Judge Wald set forth an ambitious agenda for attention, including legal services for awards for their leadership contributions and academic excellence from Dean Gregory Travaglio. Dean Francis X. Beytagh presented the Dean's Special Award to Jessica K. Shimberg. The final recognition was the presentation of the Outstanding Professor Award to Professor Earl Finbar Murphy by Joseph R. Matejkovic, co-chair of the Hooding Committee. His introduction will be memorable for his Kafka story and his Murphy-ism revelations. In his parting remarks to the graduates, Professor Murphy admonished them to "keep clear the springs of justice, hope justice will always be the result of your actions, take much enjoyment in your sunshine, and know that each moment of the bright days to come

Ohio State Tops Bar Exam

Ohio State College of Law continues its top ranking among Ohio law schools in the published results from the July 1991 bar examinations. First-time examinees had the highest pass rate of 95%. The College tied with the University of Cincinnati with a combined pass rate of 93.1% for all graduates sitting for the examination. The overall pass rate for the July bar was 83.4%. The new lawyers were sworn into the practice on Monday, November 18. Dean Francis X. Beytagh was among those participating in the ceremony at Franklin County Veterans Memorial.

Faculty and students gathered at noon in the Student Lounge on October 1, 1991, to celebrate the 100th Anniversary of the College of Law. One hundred years ago on that date, formal ceremonies in the Board of Trade Auditorium initiated an OSU school of law with classes in the Franklin County Courthouse.

Mayor Dana G. Rinehart '73 was the special guest and proclaimed that October 1, 1991, was "OSU College of Law Day" in Columbus. Also participating in the program were Dean Francis X. Beytagh, Professor Lawrence Herman, Raymond P. Cunningham '50, president-elect of the Law Alumni Association, and Robert Goldstein, president of the Student Bar Association.

A resolution of the Ohio Senate sponsored by Senator Paul E. Pfeifer '66 was also delivered to the College on October 1. The resolution recognized the many contributions of the College and its graduates to legal education, the profession, and public service.

Balloons, displays, decorative birthday cakes, special music, and student prize drawings completed the celebration of this historic occasion. The remarks of the day echoed pride and excitement, as well as readiness for the challenges of the College's second century of service.

OSU Hosts Regional Rounds of National Trial Competition

The College will host 23 teams from twelve law schools on the weekend of February 7-9 for the Regional Rounds of the National Trial Competition. In cooperation with the Franklin County Court Administration, the competition rounds will be held in the Hall of Justice.

"This will be a major coordinating enterprise," states Robert M. Krivoshey, Supervising Attorney, Clinical Programs. Over 140 lawyers will be needed to serve as presiding judges and jurors to grade and critique the student advocates in the three preliminary rounds and in the semi-finals and final competition. In addition to the participating lawyers, over 150 witnesses will be needed for the competition. "We hope that first-year law students can be recruited for these roles," says Krivoshey.

Ohio State will field two teams of three third-year students who were selected on the basis of an intra-school competition. Participation is a "labor of love," says Krivoshey, since students receive no academic credit, but must devote considerable time in preparation for the competition. Similar to moot court competitors, advocates must be prepared to compete as both plaintiff and defense counsel during the competition. Students express an enthusiasm about the competition which they regard as a "great learning experience."

JDR Bibliography Prepared and Available

The Ohio State Journal on Dispute Resolution (JDR), now in its seventh year as a leading journal in the area of alternative dispute resolution, is pleased to announce the publication of an annual Bibliography issue. The Bibliography is a continuation of the work of Carole Hinchcliff, an Acquisitions and Collection Development Librarian at the College of Law Library, who compiled Dispute Resolution: A Selected Bibliography, 1987-88 edition. The JDR issue will contain a comprehensive bibliography of over 1,000 articles written in the various fields of alternative dispute resolution during 1989, and will include a brief summary of each article's contents as well as an easy-to-use topical index. This issue will provide the ultimate comprehensive resource in this fast-growing area of the law. The Bibliography will also be available on diskette with a computerized search program. The cost of the hard cover Bibliography issue will be $8.00 for subscribers to the Ohio State Journal on Dispute Resolution; non-subscribers may purchase the single issue for $30.00, either through the Ohio State Journal on Dispute Resolution or through the American Bar Association. If your firm or library is interested in procuring a copy of this indispensable research guide to alternative dispute resolution (or the 1987-88 edition), please return the form provided or call.

In the Spotlight

Classmates Honored by University

Thomas E. Cavendish '53 and Robert J. Watkins '53 have not only maintained a life-long friendship since their student days at OSU, but they have also served with distinction in leadership roles on behalf of the College and University Development Fund.

Alumni Association president presents Merzhon Award to Thomas Cavendish.

Thomas E. Cavendish was honored by The Ohio State University Alumni Association on October 25, 1991, as recipient of the Ralph Davenport Merzhon Award for exceptional alumni leadership. This award recognized among his contributions his extraordinary leadership as principal co-chair of the recently completed and highly successful $14.5 million College of Law Centennial Campaign.

Cavendish is a long-time member of the College's National Council, serving as chair from 1981 to 1986. He is a founder and member of the executive committee of the Henry Folsom Page Society and a past president of the Law Alumni Association. As a member of the Presidents Club, he has given distinguished leadership on its executive committee and served as chair in 1989 during a time of reorganization.

Cavendish is a recognized leader at the bar, and this June he received the Columbus Bar Service Medal. He is a respected banking lawyer and a partner of Porter, Wright, Morris & Arthur, having played a significant role in the growth of the firm as a member of the management committee. Cavendish received the College's Distinguished Alumnus Award in 1988.

Robert J. Watkins was honored at the June 7 Ohio State commencement in the Ohio Stadium as recipient of a Distinguished Service Award for his "dynamic leadership" and generous University support for over twenty years. Watkins, who received both his bachelor of arts and law degrees at OSU, has devoted extraordinary time and resources to University activities in Columbus, as well as in the Cincinnati area.

Watkins is a past president of the Law Alumni Association and currently chairs the College's National Council. He also serves on the executive committee of the Henry Folsom Page Society and played an active role in the College's successful Centennial Campaign. He has been a member of the Presidents Club of the Development Fund and served two terms on its executive committee, including two years as chair. He is a strong presence on behalf of the University in the Cincinnati area and an effective leader in many capacities and activities. He is an articulate spokesman for the University and a highly respected leader who executes tasks with skill and wit.

Watkins served on the legal staff of Procter & Gamble from 1956 to 1989, including ten years as associate general counsel. He is currently a partner in the Cincinnati office of Porter, Wright, Morris & Arthur.

Moot Court Reunion

by Denise M. Mirman '82

April 6, 1991, marked the date of the first reunion of members of the National and ABA Moot Court teams. The occasion for the celebration was the thirtieth anniversary of Professor Lawrence Herman's service as advisor to the Moot Court program. The event was sponsored by former National team members Denise M. Mirman '82 and Diane C. Reichwein '83. It was held in the atrium at Porter, Wright, Morris & Arthur, Columbus, and was underwritten in part by that firm.

Karen and Larry Herman

Attendees from around the country took part in the celebration. At the start of the evening, Dean Francis X. Beytagh announced that the annual first year moot court competition would henceforth be known as the Herman Competition in honor of Professor Herman. Former team member Hon. William G. Batchelder, III '67 presented Professor Herman with a resolution from the Ohio House of Representatives commending him for his service to students at the College.

Reunion Organizers Diane Reichwein and Denise Mirman.

Professor Herman was then given a gift of a trip to New York City for him and his wife from former Moot Court Team members. (New York City is the site where the national competition takes place every year and where many teams over the last thirty years have competed.) In addition, a substantial contribution was made to the OSU Moot Court Program in Professor Herman's name.

Alice and William Batchelder

Other Fall Reunions

Jeffrey A. Ayres coordinated the first reunion of the fall season and the first reunion for the Class of 1986. Returning classmates experienced summer's heat at the September 7 football opener with Arizona State. A pre-game cookout and post-game dinner were the bill of activities.

On September 21, the Class of 1936 reunion was well-orchestrated by Maurice A. Young, who arranged for a reception and dinner at the Guest Quarters Suite Hotel. The group enjoyed their 55th anniversary, and it is anticipated that their good time will lead to another celebration in the near future.

The Class of 1961 held a special 30-year reunion at the invitation of class president Governor George Voinovich who opened the Governor's Mansion for a reunion dinner on September 21. A full weekend of events were planned by Edward F. Whipps, Michael F. Colley, and Michael E. Moritz.

Class of 1966 hold successful 25-Year Reunion for classmates and invited faculty.

Alumnotes

'32 Robert R. Richards was honored in the spring for his outstanding contribution to the Columbus Bar Foundation's 21st Century Fund. He continues to practice in the probate and real estate areas, and to travel extensively, spending three to four weeks a year out of the country.

'36 Eva Parker-Crosby manages Crosby Funeral Home in Columbus and maintains an active law practice, consisting primarily of real estate and probate work.

'44 John D. Drinko was inaugurated this spring as a Distinguished Fellow of The Cleveland Clinic Foundation.

'49 Arthur I. Vorys, senior partner of Vorys, Sater, Seymour & Pease, Columbus, has been named to the board of directors of Willis Corroon, the world's fourth-largest insurance broker. A former Ohio Superintendent of Insurance, Vorys practices corporate and regulatory aspects of insurance industry law.

'50 Arthur D. Herrmann, retired chairman and president of BancOhio and former chairman of Ohio Dominican College's Board of Trustees, was recently honored with an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degree at Ohio Dominican College's 65th commencement ceremony.

'51 Richard B. Metcalf, retired Franklin County Probate Judge, has become of counsel to the Columbus firm of Chester, Hoffman, Willcox & Saxbe.

Richard H. Oman has become a member of Vorys, Sater, Seymour & Pease, Columbus. He concentrates his practice in the areas of estate planning, probate law, and estate and gift tax.

'52 Robert M. Duncan took up residence in Bricker Hall January 2, 1992, as OSU Vice President and General Counsel. Duncan will head a new Office of Legal Affairs established as part of a recent university reorganization. He resigns as partner from Jones, Day, Reavis & Pogue, where he has served as partner since leaving the federal bench. His long-time involvement with the University, including chair of the University Hospitals Board, and with the local community prepares him for his new professional duties. Duncan has been a member of the College's National Council for many years and an active supporter of College programs.

'53 Thomas E. Cavendish received the Columbus Bar Association's highest honor, the Bar Service Medal, at a luncheon on June 12. Cavendish is a partner with the Columbus office of Porter, Wright, Morris & Arthur.

'54 John A. Jenkins continues his law practice in the area of construction law with Arter & Hadden, Columbus.

'56 Lewis J. DiRosario has been named general counsel for Ohio Presbyterian Retirement Services. He will manage all legal matters for the not-for-profit organization of eight retirement communities throughout Ohio.

Richard F. Swope recently received the Columbus Bar Association Professionalism Award, an honor bestowed for maintaining the highest standards of the profession and for demonstrating integrity and humanitarian concern.

'57 John A. Hoskins has moved from Bangladesh to Jamaica, where he is the Representative of the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) of the United Nations for Jamaica and the Bahamas. Hoskins writes, "Most of the Jamaican farmers farm small plots on the steep slopes of Jamaica's 33 inland watersheds, where soil erosion is causing loss of productivity and creates environmental problems. In a small way FAO is trying to help the farmers improve their production techniques and marketing systems to enable them to have a better life."
